The athletic events of the day were chief among the interesting happenings. The loving cup was won by the single men, Bud Moore winning the 50 yard dash. The tug of war was won by the single men led by Sheridan Gaulin. The married men were led by Sheridan Beahun. In the running broad jump contest Dan Flannigan was the winner. The baseball game was won by the Clearfield Knights under the management of Charles O'Neal, from the visiting knights, under the management of Joseph McCann.

The general opinion of the picnic-ers was that this was one of the most enjoyable outings that they had ever attended.

Innovation in the Printing of a Newspaper in Clearfield County Has Been Introduced Into This Office

When any kind of business outgrows the building in which it is transacted or an increase in population warrants it, the merchant either enlarges his store or moves to a larger one on a more prominent street. The enterprising business man never stands still. He keeps in motion with the progress of the community in which he lives. The same thing can be said of a newspaper, the owners and managers of which desire to keep abreast of the times. Old methods and ed that the old equipment should be replaced by machinery that would meet the demands made by the people of this community for greater speed in printing the paper, the manager of the Progress was quick to realize that so long as the old press was in use the paper would be handicapped, and he promptly entered into negotiations which culminated in the purchase of a press superior in construction to anything in the printing press line ever seen in Clearfield county.

WHAT IS BRITISH FLEET DOING?

Operations of Naval Branches of British and German Governments Remain Unknown—No Correspondents With the Ships to Report

(European Manager of the International News Service.)

London, Aug. 27.—What has been going on in the North sea? That is the greatest mystery of the war, the problem most difficult to solve. It is now over three weeks since the announcement was made that the English fleet had left Portsmouth and was composed of the great battle Russian army, is believed marching silently, but with force, on Posen, the strategic point in German Poland on the Warthe, about 45 miles east of Berlin.

A high military authority is saying that Russia will mobilize 1,000,000 men in Germany and Austria within fifteen days.

...ing and enemy's news as well as his own, was lifted for the bare statement. Then it dropped again and nothing authentic has since been heard of the men-o'-war in the North sea. The outside world cannot pierce the veil. There are no correspondents aboard the warships of either England or Germany in the North sea to send back even colored descriptions.

to send back even censored despatches of the fighting on land, the public hears something. At the start there were correspondents in Belgium and every day some news more or less authentic of the fighting in Belgium and in Alsace and Lorraine has been published. But of the naval actions in the North sea, not a word. At first there were stories of a great battle. Heavy firing was said to have been heard at sea. Then it was said that the British fleet had been sighted off the coast of Belgium. Then it was said that the British fleet had been sighted off the coast of Belgium. Then it was said that the British fleet had been sighted off the coast of Belgium.

been heard at several of our various British coast towns. One story said that a German Zeppelin with bombs had destroyed a British warship every night. But all of these reports were effectively denied. It is a fact that the world has learned the English from the North sea since the British and German fleets met in the North Sea.

German fleets put to sea there. Has there been a battle?

It seems reasonable, if the Germans had met with actual reverses upon the sea, that the British censor would be ready and willing to publish them. On the other hand, if the Germans have been successful, the London censor would hardly be expected to advertise them, but the fact would surely have been given out in Berlin and have

BURIAL WITH FULL HONORS, OF WAR'S FIRST VICTIMS.

This photograph, taken in England, and just received in this country shows English sailors honoring the war's first victims, four Germans and four Englishmen. The eight men perished when H. M. S. Amphion and the steamship Koenig Louise were destroyed in the North sea. The dead were buried side by side with full naval honors and the firing of a salute.

Some Remedy.

A gentleman, traveling through the South, stopped at the cabin of an old negro woman for a drink of water. Noticing her extreme age and rheumatic condition, he told her that a friend of his who was 80 years old and who had been a great sufferer with rheumatism had recently married a beautiful young girl 18 years old.

The old negress was very thoughtful for a moment and then said: "Is that so? Dey sho is tryin' most ebery thing these here days fer rheumatism, ain't dey?"

FIXING THE BLAME.

He found his own front porch with wonderful accuracy, navigated the steps with precision and discovered the keyhole by instinct. Once in the dimly lighted hall, there was an ominous silence followed by a tremendous crash.

"Why, what has happened, Henry?" came a voice from above. "It's all right, Mary, but I'll—I'll learn those goldfish to snap at me!"—Everybody's.

SAGE TEA DANDY
TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your lock become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

IN THE MOVIES

While acting before the camera in the breakers on the coast of Southern California at a point midway between San Pedro and Redondo, J. Warren Kerrigan, the idol of the films, and who is featured by the Universal in Victor brand dramas, was attacked by a man-eating shark and suffered severe lacerations on his left leg and right shoulder. That he was not drawn under the water and drowned or more severely bitten was due to the fact that he wore a small wrist watch. When the shark first attacked him, it tore a seven-inch gash, below the knee, in his left leg. Mr. Kerrigan was drawn under the water for an instant and the teeth of the big fish tore into his shoulder. He grappled with his enemy, but the fish was too slippery for him. At this instant, however, the watch caught and clung fast to the fish's head. Mr. Kerrigan thinks that the stem of the time-piece caught in the shark's eye, as, had it caught in its mouth, he would probably have lost his hand.

The injured actor was hurried to an emergency hospital at San Pedro, and when it was ascertained that none but flesh wounds had been inflicted, he was removed to a Los Angeles hospital, where he was for by Dr. Lloyd Moss, the universal physician. The wounds are cauterized and it is believed there is no danger of infection. It is assumed his work in a few days.

"Heart Beats" is a three-act drama that will interest you at the opera house this evening. It is a story with a thrill to it from end to finish.

turned at once to launch one of the canoes.
As soon as it was in the water, Rose took her place in the bow, paddle in hand, and Alan was about to step in astern when a fourth shot sounded and a bullet kicked up turf within a dozen feet. A glance discovered two figures debouching into the clearing. He dropped into place and, planting paddle in shallows, sent the canoe well out with a vigorous thrust.
Two strokes took it to the middle of the pool where immediately the current caught the little craft in its urgent grasp and sped it smoothly through more narrow and higher banks. A moment more, and the mouth of the gorge was yawning to them.

With the clean balance of an experienced canoeist, Alan rose to his feet for an instantaneous reconnoissance both forward and astern. He looked back first, and groaned in his heart to see the sharp prow of the second canoe glide out from the banks. He looked ahead and groaned aloud. The rapids were a wilderness of shouting waters, white and green, worse than anything he had anticipated or ever dreamed of.

But there was now no escaping that ordeal. The canoe was already spinning between walls where the water ran deep and fast with a glassy surface.

The next instant it was in the jaws; and the man settled down to work with grim determination, pitting courage and strength and experience against the raving waters that tore at the canoe on every hand, whose mad clamor beat back and forth between the walls of the gorge like vast bellows of internal mirth.

He fought like one possessed. There was never an instant's grace for judgment or execution; the one must be synchronous with the other, both instantaneous, or else—destruction.

The canoe wove this way and that like an insane shuttle threading some antaneic loom. Now it hesitated, nuzzling a gigantic boulder over which the water wore a pale green and glistening hood, now in the space of a heartbeat it shot forward twice its length through a sea of creaming waves, now plunged wildly toward what promised instant annihilation and cheated that only by the timely plunge of a paddle, guided by luck or instinct or both.

The one ray of hope in Alan's mind, when he surveyed before committing himself and the woman he loved to that hideous gauntlet, sprang from the fact that, however rough, the rapids were short. Now, when he had been in their grasp a minute, he seemed to have been there hours.

His labors were tremendous, unbelievable, inspired. In the end they were all but successful. The goal of safety was within thirty seconds' more of quick, hard work, when Alan's paddle broke and the canoe swung broadside to a boulder, turned turtle and precipitated both headlong into that savage welter.

RAILROADS START WAR ON PROFESSIONAL HOBBOES

Reports from various places along the Pennsylvania railroad are to the effect that tramps are giving the forces along the lines more trouble than usual. It is reported in some places that attempts to put the hoboes off the right of way have resulted in assaults on the officers. Orders were given out recently to eliminate the illegal train riders and hoboes from the main line entirely. The result has been that many of the camps along the tracks have been broken up. Reports to the general offices state that in several instances the hoboes stoned the police. In the opinion of the heads of the Pennsylvania railroad police department, the magistrates are not severe enough in their sentences. It is also said that riding trains is not the only trouble caused by the hoboes. At a number of places where tramps have made their headquarters, fires have proved costly. Frequently the hoboes leave their camp fires burning, a strong wind fans the flames and starts a blaze which often spreads to piles of ties, and to other railroad property, resulting in much damage. In the opinion of Capt. Barclay of the Philadelphia division police, the workhouse is the only remedy to wipe out the tramp nuisance.

Few Men Disciplined.

Acting Superintendent F. P. Abercrombie of the Bedford division of the Pennsylvania railroad has issued his discipline bulletin for the month of July, showing that only five employees were disciplined for violations of the rules during the month. A splendid record. Of the five, one brakeman was suspended for overstaying his leave of absence, one for carelessness in shifting cars and three others were reprimanded for minor faults.

Five Mile Road Pays.

One of the shortest railroads in the United States, which has paid 4 per cent. dividends since it first began to operate, extends from Waterville to Douglas Junction, Wash., a distance of five miles. When the Great Northern railway was pushed through the territory it left the little town of Waterville off its map, and the five mile road was left. The directors of the road decided to own and run their own road, which was completed last year.

ern at Douglas Junction. The road is now in its fourth year of operation.

The New Haven Dissolution.

Moorfield Storey, of Boston, counsel for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, began work here Tuesday with the department of justice on the decree dissolving the New Haven merger. It is to be presented as soon as possible to the federal court in New York. It will follow the lines laid down in the agreement between the railroad and the government.

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Even without a head I should know Mrs. Ladley," I retorted.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Let's trust she's still alive, for my sake," he said. "But I'm glad, anyhow, that this woman had a head. You'll allow me to be glad, won't you?"

"You can be anything you want as far as I'm concerned," I snapped and went out.

Mr. Holcombe still retained the second story front room. I think, although he said nothing more about it, that he was still "playing horse." He wrote a good bit at the washstand, and from the loose sheets of manuscript he left, I believe actually tried to begin a play. But mostly he wandered along the water front or stood on one or another of the bridges, looking at the water and thinking. It is certain that he tried to keep in the habit of smoking cigarettes, but he hated them, and usually ended by throwing the cigarette away and lighting an old pipe he carried.

On that Thursday evening he came home and sat down to supper with Mr. Reynolds. He ate little and seemed much excited. The talk ran on crime, as it always did when he was around, and Mr. Holcombe quoted Spencer a great deal—Herbert Spencer. Mr. Reynolds was impressed, not knowing much beyond silks and the National League.

"Spencer," Mr. Holcombe would say. "Spencer shows that every occurrence is the inevitable result of what has gone before and carries in its train an equally inevitable series of results. Try to interrupt this chain in the smallest degree and what follows? Chaos, my dear sir, chaos."

"We see that at the store," Mr. Reynolds would say. "Acconitum a lot of women to a silk sale on Fridays, and then make it tooth brushes. That's chaos, all right."

Well, Mr. Holcombe came in that night about 10 o'clock, and I told him Ladley was back. He was almost wild with excitement, wanted to have the back parlor, so he could watch him through the keyhole, and was terribly upset when I told him there was no keyhole, that the door fastened with a thumb bolt. On learning that the room was to be papered the next morning he grew calmer, however, and let the paperhanger's address from me. He went out just after that.

Friday, as I say, was very quiet. Mr. Ladley moved to the back parlor to let the paperhanger in the front room, smoked and fussed with his papers all day, and Mr. Holcombe stayed in his room, which was unusual. In the afternoon Molly Maguire put on the striped fur coat and went out, going slowly past the house so that I would be sure to see her. Beyond banging the window down, I gave her no satisfaction.

At 4 o'clock Mr. Holcombe came to my kitchen, rubbing his hands together. He had a pasteboard tube in his hand about a foot long, with an arrangement of small mirrors in it. He said it was modeled after the something or other that is used on a submarine, and that he and the paperhanger had fixed a place for it between his floor and the ceiling of Mr. Ladley's room, so that the chandelier would hide it from below. He thought he could watch Mr. Ladley through it, and as it turned out he could.

"I want to find his weak moment," he said excitedly. "I want to know what he does when the door is closed and he can take off his mask. And I want to know if he sleeps with a light."

"If he does," I replied, "I hope you'll let me know, Mr. Holcombe. The gas bills are a horror to me as it is. I think he kept it on all last night. I turned off all the other lights and went to the cellar. The meter was going around."

"Fine," he said. "Every murderer fears the dark, and our friend of the parlor bedroom is a murderer, Mrs. Pitman. Whether he hangs or not, he's a murderer."

The mirror affair, which Mr. Holcombe called a periscope, was put in that day and worked amazingly well. I went with him to try it out, and I distinctly saw the paperhanger take a cigarette from Mr. Ladley's case and put it in his pocket. Just after that, Mr. Ladley sauntered into the room and looked at the new paper. I could both see and hear him. It was rather weird.

"Gee, what a wall paper," he said.

CHAPTER VII.

THAT was Friday afternoon. All that evening and most of Saturday and Sunday Mr. Holcombe sat on the floor with his eye to the reflecting mirror and his notebook beside him. I have it before me.

On the first page is the "dog ment-$2" entry. On the next, the description of what occurred on Sunday night, March 4, and Monday morning, the 5th. Following that came a sketch, made with a carbon sheet of the torn paper found behind the washstand;

And then came the entries for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Friday evening:
6:20—Getting hearty supper.
7—Lights cigarette and paces floor. Notice that when Mrs. P. knocks he goes to desk and pretends to be writing.

8—Is examining book. Looks like a railway guide.

8:30—It is a steamship guide.

8:45—Tailor's boy brings box. Gives boy 50 cents. Query: Where does he get money now that J. B. is gone?

9—Tries on new suit (thrown).

9:20—Has been spending a quarter of an hour of his knees looking behind furniture and examining baseboard.

10—He has the key to the onyx clock. Has hidden it twice—once up the chimney pipe, once behind baseboard.

10:15—He has just thrown key or similar small article outside window into yard.

11—Has gone to bed. Light burning. Shall sleep here on floor.

11:30—He cannot sleep. Is up walking the floor and smoking.

2 a. m.—Saturday. Disturbance below. He had nightmare and was calling "Jennie!" He got up, took a drink and is now reading.

8 a. m.—Must have slept. He is shaving.

12 m.—Nothing this morning. He wrote for four hours, sometimes reading aloud what he had written.

2 p. m.—He has a visitor, a man. Cannot hear all—word now and then. "Llewellyn is the very man." "Devil of a risk." "We'll see you through."

"Lost the slip." "Didn't go to the hotel. She went to a private house."

"Eliza Shaeffer."

Who went to a private house? Jennie Brice?

2:30—Cannot hear. Are whispering. The visitor has given Ladley roll of bills.

4—Followed the visitor; a tall man with a pointed beard. He went to the Liberty theater. Found it was Bronson, business manager there. Who is Llewellyn, and who is Eliza Shaeffer?

4:15—Had Mrs. P. bring telephone book; six Llewellyns in the book; no Eliza Shaeffer. Ladley appears more cheerful since Bronson's visit. He has bought all the evening papers and is searching for something. Has not found it.

7—Ate well. Have asked Mrs. P. to take my place here while I interview the six Llewellyns.

11—Mrs. P. reports a quiet evening. He read and smoked. Has gone to bed. Light burning. Saw five Llewellyns. None of them knew Bronson or Ladley. Sixth—a lawyer—out at revival meeting. Went to the church and walked home with him. He knows something. Acknowledged he knew Bronson. Had met Ladley. Did not believe Mrs. Ladley dead. Regretted I had not been to the meeting. Good sermon. Asked me for a dollar for missions.

9 a. m.—Sunday. Ladley in bad shape. Apparently been drinking all night. Cannot eat. Sent out early for papers and has searched them all. Found entry on second page, stared at it, then flung the paper away. Have sent for same paper.

10 a. m.—Paper says: "Body of woman washed ashore yesterday at Seewickley. Much mutilated by flood debris." Ladley in bed, staring at ceiling. Wonder if he sees tube? He is glacially.

That is the last entry in the notebook for that day. Mr. Holcombe called me in great excitement shortly after 10 and showed me the item. Neither of us doubted for a moment that it was Jennie Brice who had been found. He started for Seewickley that same afternoon, and he probably communicated with the police before he left, for once or twice I saw Mr. Graves, the detective, sauntering past the house.

Mr. Ladley ate no dinner. He went out at 4, and I had Mr. Reynolds follow him. But they were both back in a half hour. Mr. Reynolds reported that Mr. Ladley had bought some headache tablets and some bromide powders to make him sleep.

Mr. Holcombe came back that evening. He thought the body was that of Jennie Brice, but the head was gone. He was much depressed and did not immediately go back to the periscope. I asked if the head had been cut off or taken off by a steamer. He was afraid the latter, as a hand was gone too.

It was about 11 o'clock that night that the doorbell rang. It was Mr. Graves, with a small man behind him. I knew the man. He lived in a shanty boat not far from my house, a curious affair with shelves full of dishes and tinware. In the spring he would be towed up the Monongahela a hundred miles or so and float down, trying up at different landings and selling his wares. Timothy Swift was his name. We called him Tim.

Mr. Graves motioned me to be quiet. Both of us knew that behind the parlor door Ladley was probably listening.

"Sorry to get you up, Mrs. Pitman," said Mr. Graves. "But this man says he has bought beer here today. That won't do, Mrs. Pitman."

"Beer? I haven't such a thing in the house. Come in and look!" I snapped. And the two of them went back to the kitchen.

"Now," said Mr. Graves when I had shut the door, "where's the dog's meat man?"

"Upstairs."

"Bring him quietly."

I called Mr. Holcombe, and he came eagerly, notebook and all. "Ah?" he said when he saw Tim. "So you're turned up?"

"Yes, sir."

"It seems, Mr. Dog's—Mr. Holcombe," said Mr. Graves, "that you are right—partly anyhow. Tim here did help a man with a boat that night."

"Threw him a rope, sir," Tim broke in. "He'd got out in the current, and with the ice and his not knowing much about a boat he'd have kept on to New Orleans if I hadn't caught him—or kingdom come."

"Exactly. And what time did you say this was?"

"Between 3 and 4 last Sunday night—or Monday morning. He said he "couldn't sleep and went out in a boat, meaning to keep in close to shore. But he got drawn out in the current."

"Where did you see him last?"

"By the Ninth street bridge."

"Did you call him?"

"He saw my light and called me. I was making fast to a coal barge after one of my ropes had broken."

"You threw the line to him there?"

"No, sir. He tried to work to the shore. I ran along River avenue to below the Ninth street bridge. He got pretty close in there, and I threw him a rope. He was about done up."

"Would you know him again?"

"Yes, sir. He gave me $5 and said to say nothing about it. He didn't want anybody to know he had been such a fool."

"They took him quietly upstairs then and let him look through the periscope. He identified Mr. Ladley absolutely."

When Tim and Mr. Graves had gone Mr. Holcombe and I were left alone in the kitchen. Mr. Holcombe jumped over and pulled later as he lay in his basket.

"We've got him, old boy," he said. "The chain is just about complete. He'll never kick you again."

But Mr. Holcombe was wrong—not about kicking Peter, although I don't believe Mr. Ladley ever did that again, but in thinking we had him.

I washed that next morning, Monday, but all the time I was rubbing and scratching and hanging out my mind was with Jennie Brice. The sight of Molly Maguire went door at the window rubbing and brushing at the fur coat only made things worse.

At noon when the Maguire youngsters came home from school I letted Tommy, the youngest, into the kitchen with the promise of a doughnut.

"I see your mother has a new fur coat," I said, with the plate of doughnuts just beyond his reach.

"Yes'm."

"She didn't buy it?"

"She didn't buy it. Say, Mrs. Pitman, gimme that doughnut."

"Oh, so the coat washed in?"

"No'm. I'm found it down by the point on a cake of ice. He thought it was a dog, and rowed out for it."

Well, I hadn't wanted the coat, so far as that goes; I'd managed well enough without fur for twenty years or more. But it was a satisfaction to know that it had not floated into Mrs. Maguire's kitchen and spread itself at her feet, as one may say. However, that was not the question after all. The real issue was that if it was Jennie Brice's coat and was found across the river on a cake of ice, then one of two things was certain: Either Jennie Brice's body wrapped in the coat had been thrown into the water out in the current, or she herself, hoping to incriminate her husband, had flung her coat into the river.

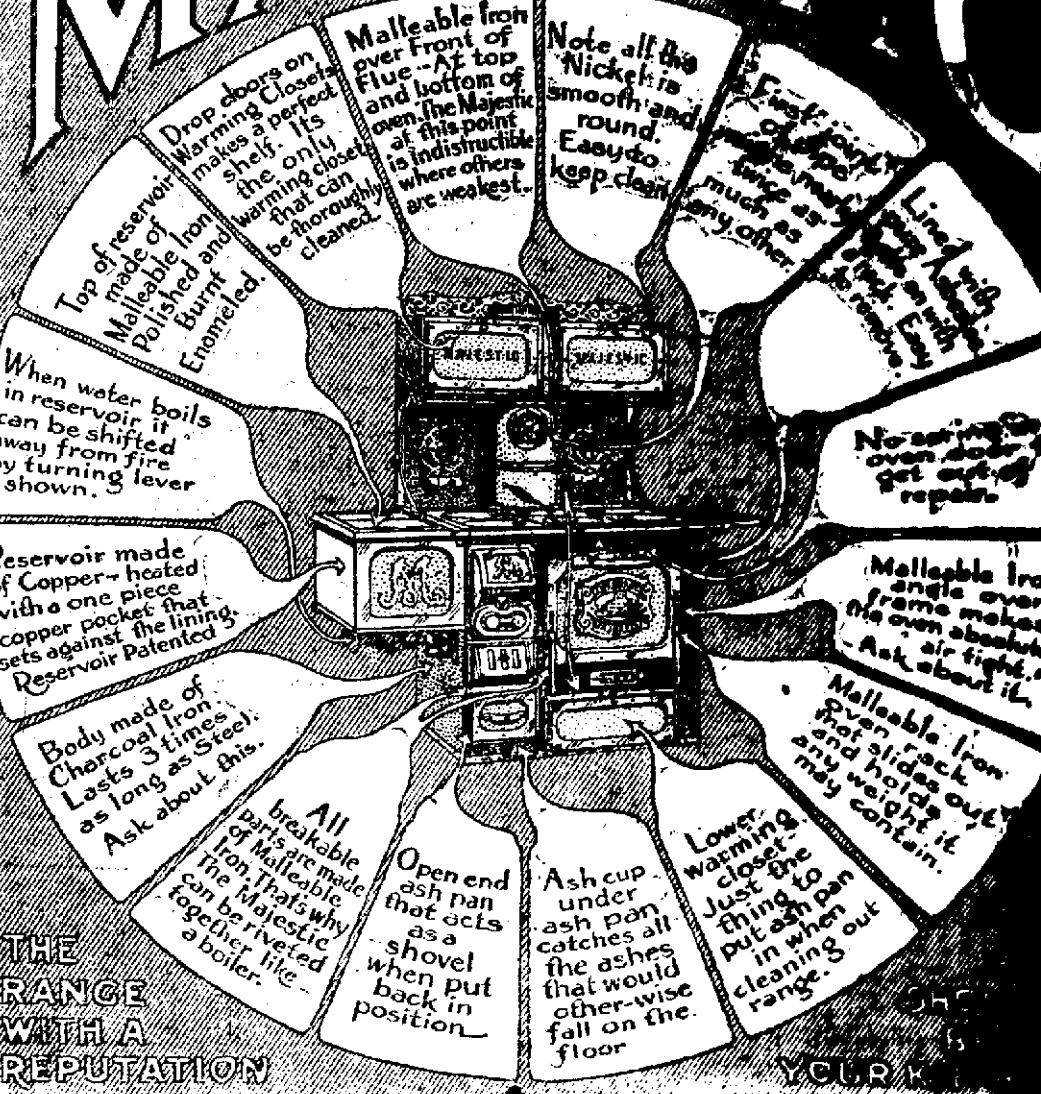

I told Mr. Holcombe, and he interviewed Joe Maguire that afternoon. The upshot of it was that Tommy had been correctly informed. Joe had witnesses who had lined up to see him rescue a dog, and had beheld his return in triumph with a wet and sooty fur coat. At 3 o'clock Mrs. Maguire, instructed by Mr. Graves, brought the coat to me for identification, turning it about for my inspection, but refusing to take her hands off it.

"Threw him a rope, sir," Tim broke in.

FOOTBALL SEASON WILL OPEN SEPTEMBER 19th

New York, Aug. 27 Just about three weeks more and the bulk of our refined young college athletes will proceed about the business of fracturing each other's bones so as to add more honor and glory to their Alma Mater.

They pry the lid off the football season on September 19th with a number of high school games and two real games—Carlisle vs. Albright at Carlisle, Pa., and the University of Maine vs. Fort McKinley at Orono, Me.

On the Saturday following, about a score more of the big leagues will wage their first games, and the schedule for the 3rd of October shows that every institution in the country will have its gridiron army in action.

The biggest game of the year will be the Harvard-Michigan combat at Cambridge on October 31st. The Harvard outfit with Brickley Mahan and a half dozen other of the 1913 champions, will have a team that should rank as wonderful as any that ever battled for the Crimson.

Michigan lost Craig, its wonderful half-back of 1913 team will be missing, but "Hurry Up" Yost feels confident that he can weld together a real battle—and no alibis if they lost.

"The game with Harvard this year will determine Michigan's standing for the past 15 years and the next 10 years," Yost told his pupils. "In meeting Harvard we will meet the best there is in the East. We will encounter a style of play that is different than ours, and different than we have met before."

"Michigan's reputation in the football world is at stake in this game. A decisive victory for Michigan will bear us out in our contention for twelve or thirteen years—that the western teams on the average are superior to the best in the East. A defeat, even if our team is not up to the old Michigan standard, shatters our contentions. So we must not lose. We must win."

Quite a number of college coaches whose proteges have been beaten up in other years by the Carlisle Indians now seem to have "discovered" a good excuse to duck out of school game with the Indians in 1915.

The Indians are tainted!!! They get real money for playing. Honest, they do. And the strange part of it is they aren't ashamed to admit now, and never have made any secret of it in the past. Probably the dual coaches wouldn't get so excited about it if those Indians had given their teams half a chance in past football arguments. But they haven't. They just met the white enemy and valiantly fought until they were tired. Then they rested and renewed the walloping.

The fact that the Indian players get a divvy of the gate receipts never has been disguised by Coach Elmer Warner. The school, being a government proposition, does not feel that it can conscientiously accept the big sums realized from football for the general maintenance of the college. The football expense each year do not total over $30,000—sometimes less.

Warner took a contract to coach the school. He did it on something like a commission basis. He agreed to take all the receipts and pay the expenses. The rest was to be his for services. But Warner never has kept all the residue. He has deducted for himself each year a portion that would be equivalent to what he would get in the way of a salary, were he on a straight salary. The balance he has proportioned equally among the team members. These facts are public property; the books at the Indian school will show just what the football receipts have been each year and just what disposition has been made of the same.

ROAD NEAR MALINE IS STREWN WITH THE DEAD

Amsterdam, Aug. 27, via London.—The Telegram's Antwerp correspondent wires that fighting was resumed yesterday morning in the vicinity of Malines, where the Belgians have been engaged daily with German advance troops.

"The road from Malines toward Villvorde, six miles northeast of Brussels," the correspondent adds, "is littered with bodies of men and horses, while in the fields pasturing cattle have been killed by shrapnell. The Belgians captured one field gun. Everything in Brussels is going on the same as before the German occupation."

reoccupy the city. Belgian operations beyond Malines were continued throughout Tuesday night. The Belgian forces succeeded in destroying defensive works constructed by the Germans.

Violent Combat at Tournai.

A dispatch from Ghent says: "A violent combat raged at Tournai on Monday, the cannonade lasting from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock the next morning. Workmen relate that the Germans were driven back, and that the French flag was flying at Orlor, in east Flanders."

Holding the German Lines.

German forces delivered an attack on the French southern frontier yesterday (Tuesday). They were repulsed and retired all along the line. This information was given out by the official bureau yesterday afternoon.

British troops are holding the German lines between Givet and Dinant. They have been subjected to enormous pressure from the Germans who are continually charging the lines in an effort to break them; but the war office insists that not only are the lines holding, but the British have been able to push them forward at several points.

English Troops the Target.

The Germans apparently have singled out the English to bear the brunt of the fighting, and are sending against them massed bodies of infantry, while shelling the English position with guns hastily mounted in the hills and concealed behind heavy timber.

Meanwhile, the work of hastening reinforcements to the continent is in progress. Additional troops are reported to have landed in France yesterday and to have been rushed to the front.

English Losses Unknown.

Owing to the difficulty of compiling a correct list along such an extended battle front, no details of the British casualties, which Premier Asquith estimated yesterday at 2,000, yet have been received. The delay is increasing the distress of anxious relatives of men at the front.

The announcement of losses, however, only seems to have intensified British determination, judging from the extra work being performed by the recruiting officers. This tenacity of purpose was further evidenced by Premier Asquith in the house of commons yesterday afternoon in making the announcement that he proposed to ask King George to convey to the king of the Belgians the admiration with which Great Britain regarded "the heroic resistance of his army and people to the wanton invasion of their territory and an assurance of the determination of this country to support in every way the efforts of Belgium to vindicate her own independence and the public law of Europe."

Battle Raging at Malines.

London, Aug. 27.—British marines have been landed at Ostend.

An Amsterdam dispatch states that "terrible battle is raging at Malines."

English Position Satisfactory.

Premier Asquith announced in parliament this morning that the British troops position is satisfactory.

Germans "Moving Forth."

Paris, Aug. 27.—French wounded arriving here describe the German army as a "moving fortress" surrounded by fire, forming a mass that seems to be moved by powerful machinery.

Floating Mine Sinks Traveler.
London, Aug. 27.—A floating mine in the North Sea struck a steamer, four of the crew going down with the ship.

PROGRESS IS NOW PRINTED ON A FAST ROTARY PERFECTING PRESS

The press is doing its work properly. The printing, cutting and folding are all done by the press, and so rapidly that the saving of time in printing the Progress will mean the furnishing of the news of the day at least an hour later than was possible with the old press.

accompanied the press to this office and has been placed in position. An immense melting pot, a steam table, casting box, tail cutter, shaving machine, trimmer, etc.—everything necessary to the casting and preparing the form for the press—are connected with printing on a web press.

With the old press. This is one of the reasons why the management of the Progress decided to replace the old press with a new and much faster press.

Stereotyping Apparatus. To print on the web press it is necessary to stereotype the forms of type after they have been made up. complete stereotyping equipment the web press and its stereotyping outfit are something new in Clearfield, and the public is invited to call and witness the operation of getting out a modern newspaper. It was because the public has shown its appreciation of the efforts of the Progress management to print an up-to-date newspaper that the new press was installed.

The Type Setting Machine.
For some months the Progress has had in operation an Intertype composing machine, a machine which those who have seen it at work declare can do everything but talk. This machine is indeed a marvelous compilation of thousands of pieces, each of which, when assembled, works smoothly, quickly and efficiently, producing lines of type of various sizes as required.

The operator of the Intertype composing machine can set more type than half a dozen of the fastest hand type setters. The type is set in solid lines, so that it may be easily handled.

Why These Improvements.
These improvements were made to the equipment of the Progress office because the owners and manager of this paper believe that Clearfield will continue to grow in population and increase its business prestige. The Progress has no cause for complaint against the reception that has been given its efforts to give the people of the town and county a first-class newspaper, and we believe that our desire to print a newspaper which deserves the name will receive the support of its readers.

The circulation of the Progress is constantly growing, because the people want to know what is going on in their own country and to learn the latest news from the war in Europe.

Latest and Best News.
With a new fast press which will enable the paper to receive and put in type of news up to a few minutes of the time of going to press the Progress will be in a position to publish war news and other information in advance of that found in any other newspaper to be had in Clearfield.

The Progress has always had faith in the future of Clearfield, and to the best of its ability this paper has stood loyally by the town in which it is published, being satisfied that the people of Clearfield would patronize and appreciate a newspaper which strives to advance their own and the town's best interests.

GREATEST MYSTERY OF PRESENT WAR

reached the world by this time. The two fleets now in the North sea are, in their intricacy of construction and their death-dealing facilities, the finest product of all ages of maritime warfare, which is as old as the sea and as old as mankind.

These fleets are to fight the most important battle of the war, for the supremacy of the sea is perhaps the greatest prize of the great conflict—England has held the leadership of the ocean. Germany wants it. Germany is fighting to control the balance of power of Europe and to control the colonies of the world. If she would command the land, Germany must control the sea.

So it is that a vital, if not the most vital issue of the great war, hangs on the outcome of affairs in the North sea and that is the one thing about which the public has not the slightest inkling. Everything is fair in love and war, old adage has it. Love is always with the world. There are daily reminders of its existence, but the world is now learning again that all is fair in war, also.

It was three hundred years ago that Francis Bacon told the English: "He that commands the sea is at great liberty and may take as much or as little of war as he will, whereas those that are strongest by land are, nevertheless, often in difficulties."

Germany, under Wilhelm II, is ambitious for supremacy in Europe. She is now engaged in great fighting in Belgium. If Germany loses this land battle, her ambition can yet be satisfied if she gains in her warfare on the sea. On the other hand, England holding the supremacy of the sea if she is defeated in the land fighting, can yet hold the command of a Germany only victorious on the land.

In nearly all great wars naval victories have decided the issue. In battles deciding the command of the sea, the world's history has had its turning points. The naval battle of Salamis was fought B. C. 480 and its victory for the Greeks saved the European continent from Oriental domination under the Persians. The naval battle of Actium, fought B. C. 31, overthrew Anthony and Cleopatra and overthrew as well their plan to make Alexandria, Egypt, the capital of the Roman empire and shaping its destinies by Eastern instead of Western ideas. The battle of Actium marked the end of the Roman empire, with many vicissitudes, which lasted until Napoleon's time.

The defeat of the great Spanish Armada of Philip II, by the English in 1589 when Elizabeth was queen not only saved England to the English, but saved English civilization to the western world of America.

Great Britain was again rescued from invasion and the domination of the First Napoleon by the battle of Trafalgar in 1805.

It was on May 27, 1905, when Russia and Japan were at war in eastern waters, that Admiral Togo began the great naval battle of Tsushima, the Japanese fleet reading his inspiring message as the flags fluttered up to the signal yards of Togo's flagship, Mikasa. "The rise or fall of our empire depends upon today's battle. Let every man do his utmost." Japan on that day swept the Russian fleet from the sea at Tsushima and eventually swept it from Eastern waters. The Japanese-Russian war was practically settled by that battle and Japan's place among the great powers of the world dates from that engagement.

Should Germany be able to obtain in the North such a naval victory over the British warships it would probably win the war for her and rank in importance to a Trafalgar or Tsushima.

Austrian Flies From the Allies

(By International News Service)
Rome, Aug. 27.—A Cettigne dispatch states that an Austrian squadron of four cruisers and eight destroyers bombarded Badua, but fled at the approach of French and British warships.

Austrian naval officers admit that the cruiser Zeenta, a destroyer, was sunk during a recent battle.

CIMO TO BE SENTENCED BY COURT ON MONDAY

It is probable that Philip Cimò, the murderer of Marie Bruzotte in Clearfield last spring, will be called before Judge Bell for sentence on Monday next. Cimò will be the second murderer to be sentenced to the electric chair from Clearfield county. Actelli, who killed another Italian at Madona, being the first.

Argument on the application of the attorneys for Raphael Mastriani and Paul Caro, convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of Antonio Matafire, on the West Side, for a new trial will also probably be heard by the court on Monday.

WHY WAR CAUSES HIGHER SUGAR

Belgium—Production 1913-14, 239,000 tons sugar. Sowings, 1914-15, 54,000 hectares. Liege province is the second largest sugar producer in the country, growing about one-quarter of the crop. Brabant province, containing Brussels, is the next largest, then Liege. About one-third of the crop is produced in Hainaut, south of Brussels on the French border. Namur and the other provinces produce but little sugar.

Holland—Production 1913-14, 230,000 tons sugar. Sowings, 1914-15, 60,000 hectares. North Brabant, which stretches along most of the Belgium border contains 16 of the 28 factories of Holland. Limburg contains none, and there are but four other factories near the German border.

Germany—Production 1913-14, 2,730,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 750,000 hectares. Alsace, Lorraine and Baden produce little sugar, but Rhineland, which borders on Belgium has about 18,000 hectares in beets this year and last year produced 86,792 tons of sugar.

The four districts of Prussia bordering on Russia are large producers of sugar. The sowings in East and West Prussia totaled 35,165 hectares in Posen 65,863 hectares, and in Silesia 80,828 hectares, a total of 184,796 hectares, or about a third of the German crop thus borders Russia. Each fall it is customary to bring large number of Russians into these districts of work in the beets. West of Posen is Brandenburg containing Berlin, where 23,360 hectares were planted this year.

The other districts producing large quantities of sugar are Pomerania and Mecklenburg on the Baltic Sea, the province of Saxony, in which is Magdeburg, growing 124,124 hectares, and Hanover, Brunswick and Anhalt. All these are in the center of the country. The kingdom of Saxony and other states and provinces of the empire produce small amounts.

Russia—Production 1913-14, 1,705,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 840,000 hectares. The sowings in Poland constitute about a tenth of these, these in Podolia and Volhynie, on the Galician (Austrian) border about a fourth, and Kiev adjoining these latter, inland, another fourth.

Austria—Production 1913-14, 1,710,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, produced near the Russian border. Galicia contains 2 factories, and Bukovina 3. Hungary, farther south contains 32 factories. Bosnia and Slavonia each contain 1 factory. The other 188 factories are located mostly in Bohemia and other western sections bordering Germany.

Kaly—Production 1913-14, 327,800 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 38,600 hectares. Of the 39 factories 9 are located in the old Province of Venice, on which borders Austria and Switzerland; 15 are in Emilia, the next province south of these.

Servia—Production in 1913-14, 6,500 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 9,000 hectares. Servia has only 2 beet sugar factories.

Roumania—Production 1913-14, 32,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 20,000 hectares. Roumania has 5 factories.

Bulgaria—Production 1913-14, 7,800 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15 hectares. Bulgaria has 2 beet factories.

Capture Two Towns.
"Our troops occupied the towns of Instenburg and Angerburg, thirty-two miles south of Interburg (east Prussia). On August 23 and 24, in the region north of Kedenburg, we fought a successful, at sanguinary engagement with important forces of Germans.

"On Sunday and Monday our troops facing intrenchments and wire entanglements attacked these positions, using hand grenades and bayonets. Toward 11 o'clock the German army corps was enveloped by us on the left flank and fled to Osterode (eighteen miles northeast of Goettingen, in the province of Hanover), abandoning several cannon, quick-firing guns, ammunition cases and prisoners.

"On the left bank of the River Viadula the enemy retired from the line Plock-Lentchitz."

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HAVE ENJOYABLE TIME

The Knights of Columbus picnic, held at the Driving park yesterday, was attended by about 300 people from Clearfield and the surrounding country. It was a basket picnic, dinner and supper being served at the park. Dancing furnished amusement during the afternoon and evening.

The athletic events of the day were chief among the interesting happenings. The loving cup was won by the single men, Bud Moore winning the 50 yard dash. The tug of war was won by the single men led by Sheridan Gaulin. The married men were led by Sheridan Beahan. In the running broad jump contest Dan Flannigan was the winner. The baseball game was won by the Clearfield Knights under the management of Charles O'Neal, from the visiting knights, under the management of Joseph McCann.

The general opinion of the picnicers was that this was one of the most enjoyable outings that they had ever attended.

WHY WAR CAUSES HIGHER SUGAR

Great Sugar Belt Fields are in the Zone of Conflicts

ENGLAND CORNERED PRODUCT

Production of Sugar in the European War Districts Must Practically Cease Because of the Fighting in the Territory in Which the Sweet Stuff is Produced.

(By International News Service)

The reason for the advance in the price of sugar since the European war began is that the great sugar beet fields of the continent are in the zones of actual fighting. In the federal, state and municipal crusades in this country, since the war began, against alleged unwarranted increase in the high cost of living, it has been said that the advance in sugar was not justified.

Sugar men think differently and point to the fact that the sugar plantations of France and Germany are directly in the line of fighting on the Belgian frontier of France and the Russian frontier of Germany.

Almost all the sugar produced in Europe comes from those two regions and the sugar industry of Europe is likely to be paralyzed for years to come because of the struggle.

It has been pointed out that the destruction of sugar beet fields of Europe need not affect the price here, as the United States imports little if any European sugar.

But immediately on the outbreak of hostilities, England bought up the entire output of one sugar refinery in the United States, and other large foreign orders have been placed. So long as the war lasts and perhaps for an indefinite period after the conclusion of peace, Europe's sugar will come from America. That is what is causing the advance in price in this country.

The production of sugar in the European war zone is as follows:

France.—Production 1913-14, 800,000 tons of sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 205,000 hectares (one hectare is 2.47 acres.) Almost all sugar is produced in the departments lying between the Belgium frontier and Paris. Several of the largest producers border on Belgium. Little sugar is produced on the Franco-German border.

PROGRESS NOW PRINTED ON A NEW ROTARY WEB PERFECTING PRESS

Innovation in the Printing of a Newspaper in Clearfield County Has Been Introduced Into This Office

When any kind of business outgrows the building in which it is transacted or an increase in population warrants it, the merchant either enlarges his store or moves to a larger one on a more prominent street. The enterprising business man never stands still. He keeps in motion with the progress of the community in which he lives. The same thing can be said of a newspaper, the owners and managers of which desire to keep abreast of the times. Old methods and machinery must give way for the new and modern methods and machinery. Installed a Web Press. For several weeks mechanics have been busy installing a new web press in the Progress office, and today this paper was printed on this press. The web press in this office has a capacity of 12,000 eight-page and 18,000 four-page copies of the paper an hour. It was manufactured by the Campbell Printing Press company, makers of the best printing machinery in this country. We believe it is the best press in use in this part of the West Branch valley.

Printing From a Roll. The Progress will be printed from a roll of paper, which passes between the forms of type and through rolls and tapes and emerges cut and folded ready for the mailer. It is not necessary for the pressman to touch the paper through any of the processes of printing, except to place a new roll on the machine and watch that

BURIAL WITH FULL HONORS, OF WAR'S FIRST VICTIMS.

This photograph, taken in England, and just received in this country shows English sailors honoring the war's first victims, four Germans and four Englishmen. The eight men perished when H. M. S. Amphion and the steamship Koenig Louise were destroyed in the North sea. The dead were buried side by side with full naval honors and the firing of a salute.

Some Remedy.

A gentleman, traveling through the South, stopped at the cabin of an old negro woman for a drink of water. Noticing her extreme age and rheumatic condition, he told her that a friend of his who was 80 years old and who had been a great sufferer with rheumatism had recently married a beautiful young girl 18 years old.

The old negress was very thoughtful for a moment and then said: "Is that so? Dey sho is tryin' most ebery thing these here days fer rheumatism, ain't dey?"

FIXING THE BLAME.

He found his own front porch with wonderful accuracy, navigated the steps with precision and discovered the keyhole by instinct. Once in the dimly lighted hall, there was an ominous silence followed by a tremendous crash.

"Why, what has happened, Henry?" came a voice from above.

"It's all right, Mary, but I'll—I'll learn those goldfish to snap at me!"—Everybody's.

Bread Made Without Flour.

Owing to the anticipated shortage of flour at Rotterdam bakers are making bread composed of equal parts of wheat, cornmeal and potato meal, to which is added a small quantity of albumen. The bread is rather close in texture, but of good flavor and color.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your lock become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

IN THE MOVIES

While acting before the camera in the breakers on the coast of Southern California at a point midway between San Pedro and Redondo, J. Warren Kerrigan, the idol of the films, and who is featured by the Universal in Victor brand dramas, was attacked by a man-eating shark and suffered severe lacerations on his left leg and right shoulder. That he was not drawn under the water and drowned or more severely bitten was due to the fact that he wore a small wrist watch. When the shark first attacked him, it tore a seven-inch gash, below the knee, in his left leg. Mr. Kerrigan was drawn under the water for an instant and the teeth of the big fish tore into his shoulder. He grappled with his enemy, but the fish was too slippery for him. At this instant, however, the watch caught and clung fast to the fish's head. Mr. Kerrigan thinks that the stem of the time-piece caught in the shark's eye, as, had it caught in its mouth, he would probably have lost his hand.

The injured actor was hurried to an emergency hospital at San Pedro, and when it was ascertained that none but flesh wounds had been inflicted, he was removed to a Los Angeles hospital, where he was taken for by Dr. Lloyd Moss, the universal physician. The wounds are cauterized and it is believed there is no danger of infection. It is assumed his work in a few days.

"Heart Beats" is a three-act drama that will interest you at the opera house this evening. It is a story with a thrill to it from end to finish.

"When Kentucky Went Dry" is a frontier comedy which will be shown this evening. The story is amusing and filled with laughter, probably scenes. A duel between the principal actors in the play is less crous rather than dangerous.

For a moment he watched in silence as she bent over the desk, rummaging its drawers. Then with an infuriated gesture of his left hand, he began to curse her.

She shuddered a little as the black oaths blistered his thin old lips, denoting her and all she loved to sin, infamy and sorrow; but nothing could stay her in her purpose. He was breathless and exhausted when she straightened up with an exclamation of satisfaction, studied intently for a moment a sheet of papers, and thrust them hastily into her hand-bag, together with the revolver.

Then touching the push-button which released a secret and little-used door, without a backward glance she slipped from the room and, closing the door securely, within another minute had made her way unseen from the house.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Incredible Thing.

Broad daylight, the top of a morning as rare as ever broke upon the north country. Alan Law opening bewildered eyes to realize the substance of a dream come true.

True it proved itself, at least, in part. He lay between blankets upon a couch of balsam furs, in a corner of somebody's camp—a log structure, weather-proof, rudely but adequately furnished. His clothing, rough-dried but neatly mended, lay upon a chair at his side.

He rose and dressed in haste, at once exulting in his sense of complete rest and renewed well-being, a prey to hints of an extraordinary appetite, and provoked by signs that seemed to bear out the wildest flights of his delirious fancies.

There were apparently indisputable evidences of a woman's recent presence in the camp: blankets neatly folded upon a second bed of aromatic balsam in the farther corner; an effect of orderliness not common with guides; a pair of dainty buckskin gauntlets depending from a nail in the wall; and—he stood staring witlessly at it for more than a minute—in an old preserve jar on the table, a single rose, warm and red, dew upon its petals!

There was also fire in the cook stove, with a plentiful display of things to cook; but despite his hunger Alan didn't stop for that, but rushed to the door and threw it open and himself out into the sunshine, only to pause, dashed, chagrined, mystified.

There was no other living thing in sight but a loon that sported far up the river and saluted him with a shriek of mocking laughter.

The place was a cleft in the hills, a table of level land some few acres in area, bounded on one hand, beneath the cliff from which he had dropped, by a rushing river fat with recent rains; on the other by a second cliff of equal height. Upstream the water curved round the shoulder of a towering hill, downstream the cliffs closed upon it until it roared through a narrow gorge.

Near the camp, upon a strip of shelving beach that bordered the river where it widened into a deep, dark pool, two canoes were drawn up, bottoms to the sun. Dense thickets of pines, oaks, and balsams hedged in the clearing.

He was, it seemed, to be left severely to himself, that day; when he had cooked and made way with an enormous breakfast, Alan found nothing better to do till time for luncheon than to explore this pocket domain.

He feasted famously again at noon; while away several hours vainly whittling the pools with red and tackling the camp, for trout hunting he really didn't hope would rise beneath that blazing sun; and toward three o'clock lounged back to his aromatic couch for a nap.

The western sun had thrown a deep, cool shadow across the cove when he was awakened by importunate hands and a voice of magic.

Rose Trine was kneeling beside him, clutching his shoulders, calling on him by name—distracted by an inexplicable anxiety.

He wasted no time discriminating between dream and reality, but gathered both into his arms. And for a moment she rested there unresisting, sobbing quietly.

"What is it? What is it, dearest?" he questioned, kissing her tears away.

"To find you all right. I was so afraid!" she cried brokenly.

"Of what? Wasn't I all right when you left me here this morning?"

She disengaged with an effort, rose, and looked down strangely at him.

"I did not leave you here this morning, Alan. I wasn't here."

That brought him to his own feet in a jiffy. "You were not!" he stammered. "Then who—?"

"Judith," she stated with conviction. "Impossible! You don't understand."

The girl shook her head. "Yet I know: Judith was here until this morning. I tell you I know—I saw her only a few hours ago. She passed us in a canoe with one of her guides while we watched in hiding on the banks. Not that alone, but another of her guides told mine she was here with you. She had sent him to South Portage for quinine. He stopped there to get drunk—and that's how my guide managed to worm the information from him."

Alan passed a hand across his eyes. "I don't understand," he said dully. "It doesn't seem possible she could—"

A shot interrupted him, the report of a rifle from a considerable distance upstream, echoed and re-echoed by the cliffs. And at this, clutching frantically at his arm, the girl drew him through the door and down toward the river.

"Oh, come, come!" she cried wildly. "There's no time!"

"But, why? What was that?"

"Judith is returning. I left my guide up the trail to signal us. Don't you know what it means if we don't manage to escape before she gets here?"

"But how?"

"According to the guide the river's the only way other than the trail."

"The current is too strong. They could follow—put us at leisure from the banks."

"But downstream—the current with us—"

"Those rapids?"

"We must shoot them!"

"Can it be done?"

"It must be!"

Two more shots put a period to his doubts and drove it home. He offered no further objection, but turned at once to launch one of the canoes.

As soon as it was in the water, Rose took her place in the bow, paddle in hand, and Alan was about to step in astern when a fourth shot sounded and a bullet kicked up turf within a dozen feet. A glance discovered two figures debouching into the clearing. He dropped into place and, planting paddle in shallows, sent the canoe well out with a vigorous thrust.

Two strokes took it to the middle of the pool where immediately the current caught the little craft in its urgent grasp and sped it smoothly through more narrow and higher banks. A moment more, and the mouth of the gorge was yawning to them.

With the clean balance of an experienced canoeist, Alan rose to his feet for an instantaneous reconnoissance both forward and astern. He looked back first, and groaned in his heart to see the sharp prow of the second canoe glide out from the banks. He looked ahead and groaned aloud. The rapids were a wilderness of shouting waters, white and green, worse than anything he had anticipated or ever dreamed of.

But there was now no escaping that ordeal. The canoe was already spinning between walls where the water ran deep and fast with a glassy surface.

The next instant it was in the jaws; and the man settled down to work with grim determination, pitting courage and strength and experience against the ravaging waters that tore at the canoe on every hand, whose mad clamor beat back and forth between the walls of the gorge like vast bellows of internal mirth.

He fought like one possessed. There was never an instant's grace for judgment or execution; the one must be synchronous with the other, both instantaneous, or else—destruction.

The canoe wove this way and that like an insane shuttle threading some antanic loom. Now it hesitated, nuzzling a gigantic boulder over which the water wore a pale green and glistening hood, now in the space of a heartbeat it shot forward twice its length through a sea of creaming waves, now plunged wildly toward what promised instant annihilation and cheated that only by the timely plunge of a paddle, guided by luck or instinct or both.

The one ray of hope in Alan's mind, when he surveyed before committing himself and the woman he loved to that hideous gauntlet, sprang from the fact that, however rough, the rapids were short. Now, when he had been in their grasp a minute, he seemed to have been there hours.

His labors were tremendous, unbelievable, inspired. In the end they were all but successful. The goal of safety was within thirty seconds' more of quick, hard work, when Alan's paddle broke and the canoe swung broadside to a boulder, turned turtle and precipitated both headlong into that savage welter.

"Don't Argue About War," Health Hint.
"Don't argue about the war," says a health bulletin issued for members by Dr. Louis R. Weismiller, physical director of the West Side Young Men's Christian association, New York. The health bulletin says:

"For your own health's sake and your own peace of mind—
"Don't argue about the war. Every man has a right to his own thoughts on the subject, and it will only make you nervous and fretful to get into an argument."

THE COUNTY FAIR.
If the county fairs in some of the counties of the state have deteriorated it has been because gambling has been permitted, not only in horse racing but in various other ways. The state withholds its appropriation to the fair at which gambling is permitted, but the state officials do not always discover the gambling devices which a too lenient management of the exhibitions permits on the fair grounds.

Clearfield county has no agricultural fair, although in years past the farmers and the farmers' wives and children showed their appreciation of the efforts of the fair managers to have on display the products of the farm. In those counties in which the farmer is given a chance to exhibit the products of his farm the fair is a success, but not in the measure which attends such exhibitions as that at Allentown, where tens of thousands of persons attend the fair, not to view the exhibits, but to have a good time generally.

It would be entirely feasible to hold an agricultural exhibition at which the farmers would have an opportunity to display their products and at which harmless but entertaining amusements could be offered to the people. There are just as good farmers in Clearfield county as elsewhere, and they should be given a chance to show their neighbors and other people what they can do in the way of growing crops, raising cattle and the like.

ARE YOU PREPARED FOR THE LONG FALL EVENINGS?

A few short days and fall will be knocking at your door. A few short weeks after and then cold, long dreary old winter will be upon you, and are you prepared for the evening which will then become dull and monotonous? When you have little gatherings at the home, have you any sort of entertainment to offer your guests? RAILROADS START WAR ON PROFESSIONAL HOBBOES

Reports from various places along the Pennsylvania railroad are to the effect that tramps are giving the forces along the lines more trouble than usual. It is reported in some places that attempts to put the hoboes off the right of way have resulted in assaults on the officers. Orders were given out recently to eliminate the illegal train riders and hoboes from the main line entirely. The result has been that many of the camps along the tracks have been broken up. Reports to the general manager state that in several instances the hoboes stoned the police. In the opinion of the heads of the Pennsylvania railroad police department, the magistrates are not severe enough in their sentences. It is also said that riding trains is not the only trouble caused by the hoboes. At a number of places where tramps have made their headquarters, fires have proved costly. Frequently the hoboes leave their camp fires burning, a strong wind fans the flames and starts a blaze which often spreads to piles of ties, and to other railroad property, resulting in much damage. In the opinion of Capt. Barclay of the Philadelphia division police, the workhouse is the only remedy to wipe out the tramp nuisance.

Few Men Disciplined.

Acting Superintendent F. P. Abercrombie of the Bedford division of the Pennsylvania railroad has issued his discipline bulletin for the month of July, showing that only five employees were disciplined for violations of the rules during the month. A splendid record. Of the five, one brakeman was suspended for overstaying his leave of absence, one for carelessness in shifting cars and three others were reprimanded for minor faults.

Five Mile Road Pays.

One of the shortest railroads in the United States, which has paid 4 per cent. dividends since it first began to operate, extends from Waterville to Douglas Junction, Wash., a distance of five miles. When the Great Northern railway was pushed through the territory it left the little town of Waterville off its map, and the five-mile road was left. The directors of the road, who owned the road, decided to own it and run it. The road, which was abandoned by the Great Northern, is now being run by the Waterville and Douglas Junction Road.

ern at Douglas Junction. The road is now in its fourth year of operation.

The New Haven Dissolution.

Moorfield Storey, of Boston, counsel for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, began work here Tuesday with the department of justice on the decree dissolving the New Haven merger. It is to be presented as soon as possible to the federal court in New York. It will follow the lines laid down in the agreement between the railroad and the government.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The public schools of Clearfield will open for the school year 1914-1915 Tuesday, September 1st. All pupils entering the Clearfield schools for the first time must present a certificate of successful vaccination.

There will be an examination in the High school building, Friday, Aug. 28th, for those who wish to get credit for advance standing and for those who have conditions.

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Even without a head I should know Mrs. Ladley," I retorted.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Let's trust she's still alive, for my sake," he said. "But I'm glad, anyhow, that this woman had a head. You'll allow me to be glad, won't you?"

"You can be anything you want as far as I'm concerned," I snapped and went out.

Mr. Holcombe still retained the second story front room. I think, although he said nothing more about it, that he was still "playing horse." He wrote a good bit at the washstand, and from the loose sheets of manuscript he left, I believe actually tried to begin a play. But mostly he wandered along the water front or stood on one or another of the bridges, looking at the water and thinking. It is certain that he tried to keep in the habit of smoking cigarettes, but he hated them, and usually ended by throwing the cigarette away and lighting an old pipe he carried.

On that Thursday evening he came home and sat down to supper with Mr. Reynolds. He ate little and seemed much excited. The talk ran on crime, as it always did when he was around, and Mr. Holcombe quoted Spencer a great deal—Herbert Spencer. Mr. Reynolds was impressed, not knowing much beyond silks and the National League.

"Spencer," Mr. Holcombe would say—"Spencer shows that every occurrence is the inevitable result of what has gone before and carries in its train an equally inevitable series of results. Try to interrupt this chain in the smallest degree and what follows? Chaos, my dear sir, chaos."

"We see that at the store," Mr. Reynolds would say. "Acconitum a lot of women to a silk sale on Fridays, and then make it tooth brushes. That's chaos, all right."

Well, Mr. Holcombe came in that night about 10 o'clock, and I told him Ladley was back. He was almost wild with excitement, wanted to have the back parlor, so he could watch him through the keyhole, and was terribly upset when I told him there was no keyhole, that the door fastened with a thumb bolt. On learning that the room was to be papered the next morning he grew calmer, however, and got the paperhanger's address from me. He went out just after that.

Friday, as I say, was very quiet. Mr. Ladley moved to the back parlor to let the paperhanger in the front room, smoked and fussed with his papers all day, and Mr. Holcombe stayed in his room, which was unusual. In the afternoon Molly Maguire put on the striped fur coat and went out, going slowly past the house so that I would be sure to see her. Beyond banging the window down, I gave her no satisfaction.

At 4 o'clock Mr. Holcombe came to my kitchen, rubbing his hands together. He had a pasteboard tube in his hand about a foot long, with an arrangement of small mirrors in it. He said it was modeled after the something or other that is used on a submarine, and that he and the paperhanger had fixed a place for it between his floor and the ceiling of Mr. Ladley's room, so that the chandelier would hide it from below. He thought he could watch Mr. Ladley through it, and as it turned out he could.

"I want to find his weak moment," he said excitedly. "I want to know what he does when the door is closed and he can take off his mask. And I want to know if he sleeps with a light."

"If he does," I replied, "I hope you'll let me know, Mr. Holcombe. The gas bills are a horror to me as it is. I think he kept it on all last night. I turned off all the other lights and went to the cellar. The meter was going around."

"Fine," he said. "Every murderer fears the dark, and our friend of the parlor bedroom is a murderer, Mrs. Pitman. Whether he hangs or not, he's a murderer."

The mirror affair, which Mr. Holcombe called a periscope, was put in that day and worked amazingly well. I went with him to try it out, and I distinctly saw the paperhanger take a cigarette from Mr. Ladley's case and put it in his pocket. Just after that, Mr. Ladley sauntered into the room and looked at the new paper. I could hear see and hear him. It was rather weird.

"Gee, what a wall paper," he said.

CHAPTER VII.

THAT was Friday afternoon. All that evening and most of Saturday and Sunday Mr. Holcombe sat on the floor with his eye to the reflecting mirror and his notebook beside him. I have it before me.

On the first page is the "dog ment-$2" entry. On the next, the description of what occurred on Sunday night, March 4, and Monday morning, the 5th. Following that came a sketch, made with a carbon sheet of the torn paper found behind the washstand;

And then came the entries for Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Friday evening:
6:20—Getting hearty supper.
7—Lights cigarette and paces floor. Notice that when Mrs. P. knocks he goes to desk and pretends to be writing.

8—Is examining book. Looks like a railway guide.

8:30—It is a steamship guide.

8:45—Tailor's boy brings box. Gives boy 50 cents. Query: Where does he get money now that J. B. is gone?

9—Tries on new suit (thrown).

9:20—Has been spending a quarter of an hour of his knees looking behind furniture and examining baseboard.

10—He has the key to the onyx clock. Has hidden it twice—once up the chimney pipe, once behind baseboard.

10:15—He has just thrown key or similar small article outside window into yard.

11—Has gone to bed. Light burning. Shall sleep here on floor.

11:30—He cannot sleep. Is up walking the floor and smoking.

2 a. m.—Saturday. Disturbance below. He had nightmare and was calling "Jennie." He got up, took a drink and is now reading.

8 a. m.—Must have slept. He is shaving.

12 m.—Nothing this morning. He wrote for four hours, sometimes reading aloud what he had written.

2 p. m.—He has a visitor, a man. Cannot hear all—word now and then. "Llewellyn is the very man." "Devil of a risk." "We'll see you through."

"Lost the slip." "Didn't go to the hotel. She went to a private house."

"Eliza Shaeffer."

Who went to a private house? Jennie Brice?

2:30—Cannot hear. Are whispering. The visitor has given Ladley roll of bills.

4—Followed the visitor; a tall man with a pointed beard. He went to the Liberty theater. Found it was Bronson, business manager there. Who is Llewellyn, and who is Eliza Shaeffer?

4:15—Had Mrs. P. bring telephone book; six Llewellyns in the book; no Eliza Shaeffer. Ladley appears more cheerful since Bronson's visit. He has bought all the evening papers and is searching for something. Has not found it.

7—Ate well. Have asked Mrs. P. to take my place here while I interview the six Llewellyns.

11—Mrs. P. reports a quiet evening. He read and smoked. Has gone to bed. Light burning. Saw five Llewellyns. None of them knew Bronson or Ladley. Sixth—a lawyer—out at revival meeting. Went to the church and walked home with him. He knows something. Acknowledged he knew Bronson. Had met Ladley. Did not believe Mrs. Ladley dead. Regretted I had not been to the meeting. Good sermon. Asked me for a dollar for missions.

9 a. m.—Sunday. Ladley in bad shape. Apparently been drinking all night. Cannot eat. Sent out early for papers and has searched them all. Found entry on second page, stared at it, then flung the paper away. Have sent for same paper.

10 a. m.—Paper says: "Body of woman washed ashore yesterday at Seewickley. Much mutilated by flood debris." Ladley in bed, staring at ceiling. Wonder if he sees tube? He is glacially.

That is the last entry in the notebook for that day. Mr. Holcombe called me in great excitement shortly after 10 and showed me the item. Neither of us doubted for a moment that it was Jennie Brice who had been found. He started for Seewickley that same afternoon, and he probably communicated with the police before he left, for once or twice I saw Mr. Graves, the detective, sauntering past the house.

Mr. Ladley ate no dinner. He went out at 4, and I had Mr. Reynolds follow him. But they were both back in a half hour. Mr. Reynolds reported that Mr. Ladley had bought some headache tablets and some bromide powders to make him sleep.

Mr. Holcombe came back that evening. He thought the body was that of Jennie Brice, but the head was gone. He was much depressed and did not immediately go back to the periscope. I asked if the head had been cut off or taken off by a steamer. He was afraid the latter, as a hand was gone too.

It was about 11 o'clock that night that the doorbell rang. It was Mr. Graves, with a small man behind him. I knew the man. He lived in a shanty boat not far from my house, a curious affair with shelves full of dishes and tinware. In the spring he would be towed up the Monongahela a hundred miles or so and float down, trying up at different landings and selling his wares. Timothy Swift was his name. We called him Tim.

Mr. Graves motioned me to be quiet. Both of us knew that behind the parlor door Ladley was probably listening.

"Sorry to get you up, Mrs. Pitman," said Mr. Graves. "But this man says he has bought beer here today. That won't do, Mrs. Pitman."

"Beer? I haven't such a thing in the house. Come in and look!" I snapped. And the two of them went back to the kitchen.

"Now," said Mr. Graves when I had shut the door, "where's the dog's meat man?"

"Upstairs."

"Bring him quietly."

I called Mr. Holcombe, and he came eagerly, notebook and all. "Ah?" he said when he saw Tim. "So you're turned up?"

"Yes, sir."

"It seems, Mr. Dog's—Mr. Holcombe," said Mr. Graves, "that you are right—partly anyhow. Tim here did help a man with a boat that night."

"Threw him a rope, sir," Tim broke in. "He'd got out in the current, and with the ice and his not knowing much about a boat he'd have kept on to New Orleans if I hadn't caught him—or kingdom come."

"Exactly. And what time did you say this was?"

"Between 3 and 4 last Sunday night—or Monday morning. He said he

"couldn't sleep and went out in a boat, meaning to keep in close to shore. But he got drawn out in the current."

"Where did you see him last?"

"By the Ninth street bridge."

"Did you call him?"

"He saw my light and called me. I was making fast to a coal barge after one of my ropes had broken."

"You threw the line to him there?"

"No, sir. He tried to work to the shore. I ran along River avenue to below the Ninth street bridge. He got pretty close in there, and I threw him a rope. He was about done up."

"Would you know him again?"

"Yes, sir. He gave me $5 and said to say nothing about it. He didn't want anybody to know he had been such a fool."

"They took him quietly upstairs then and let him look through the periscope. He identified Mr. Ladley absolutely."

When Tim and Mr. Graves had gone Mr. Holcombe and I were left alone in the kitchen. Mr. Holcombe jumped over and pulled later as he lay in his basket.

"We've got him, old boy," he said. "The chain is just about complete. He'll never kick you again."

But Mr. Holcombe was wrong—not about kicking Peter, although I don't believe Mr. Ladley ever did that again, but in thinking we had him.

I washed that next morning, Monday, but all the time I was rubbing and scratching and hanging out my mind was with Jennie Brice. The sight of Molly Maguire went door at the window rubbing and brushing at the fur coat only made things worse.

At noon when the Maguire youngsters came home from school I letted Tommy, the youngest, into the kitchen with the promise of a doughnut.

"I see your mother has a new fur coat," I said, with the plate of doughnuts just beyond his reach.

"Yes'm."

"She didn't buy it?"

"She didn't buy it. Say, Mrs. Pitman, gimme that doughnut."

"Oh, so the coat washed in?"

"No'm. I'm found it down by the point on a cake of ice. He thought it was a dog, and rowed out for it."

Well, I hadn't wanted the coat, so far as that goes; I'd managed well enough without fur for twenty years or more. But it was a satisfaction to know that it had not floated into Mrs. Maguire's kitchen and spread itself at her feet, as one may say. However, that was not the question after all. The real issue was that if it was Jennie Brice's coat and was found across the river on a cake of ice, then one of two things was certain: Either Jennie Brice's body wrapped in the coat had been thrown into the water out in the current, or she herself, hoping to incriminate her husband, had flung her coat into the river.

I told Mr. Holcombe, and he interviewed Joe Maguire that afternoon. The upshot of it was that Tommy had been correctly informed. Joe had witnesses who had lined up to see him rescue a dog, and had beheld his return in triumph with a wet and sooty fur coat. At 3 o'clock Mrs. Maguire, instructed by Mr. Graves, brought the coat to me for identification, turning it about for my inspection, but refusing to take her hands off it.

couldn't sleep and went out in a boat, meaning to keep in close to shore. But he got drawn out in the current."

"Where did you see him last?"

"By the Ninth street bridge."

"Did you call him?"

"He saw my light and called me. I was making fast to a coal barge after one of my ropes had broken."

"You threw the line to him there?"

"No, sir. He tried to work to the shore. I ran along River avenue to below the Ninth street bridge. He got pretty close in there, and I threw him a rope. He was about done up."

"Would you know him again?"

"Yes, sir. He gave me $5 and said to say nothing about it. He didn't want anybody to know he had been such a fool."

"They took him quietly upstairs then and let him look through the periscope. He identified Mr. Ladley absolutely."

When Tim and Mr. Graves had gone Mr. Holcombe and I were left alone in the kitchen. Mr. Holcombe jumped over and pulled later as he lay in his basket.

"We've got him, old boy," he said. "The chain is just about complete. He'll never kick you again."

But Mr. Holcombe was wrong—not about kicking Peter, although I don't believe Mr. Ladley ever did that again, but in thinking we had him.

I washed that next morning, Monday, but all the time I was rubbing and scratching and hanging out my mind was with Jennie Brice. The sight of Molly Maguire went door at the window rubbing and brushing at the fur coat only made things worse.

At noon when the Maguire youngsters came home from school I letted Tommy, the youngest, into the kitchen with the promise of a doughnut.

"I see your mother has a new fur coat," I said, with the plate of doughnuts just beyond his reach.

"Yes'm."

"She didn't buy it?"

"She didn't buy it. Say, Mrs. Pitman, gimme that doughnut."

"Oh, so the coat washed in?"

"No'm. I'm found it down by the point on a cake of ice. He thought it was a dog, and rowed out for it."

Well, I hadn't wanted the coat, so far as that goes; I'd managed well enough without fur for twenty years or more. But it was a satisfaction to know that it had not floated into Mrs. Maguire's kitchen and spread itself at her feet, as one may say. However, that was not the question after all. The real issue was that if it was Jennie Brice's coat and was found across the river on a cake of ice, then one of two things was certain: Either Jennie Brice's body wrapped in the coat had been thrown into the water out in the current, or she herself, hoping to incriminate her husband, had flung her coat into the river.

I told Mr. Holcombe, and he interviewed Joe Maguire that afternoon. The upshot of it was that Tommy had been correctly informed. Joe had witnesses who had lined up to see him rescue a dog, and had beheld his return in triumph with a wet and sooty fur coat. At 3 o'clock Mrs. Maguire, instructed by Mr. Graves, brought the coat to me for identification, turning it about for my inspection, but refusing to take her hands off it.

FOOTBALL SEASON WILL OPEN SEPTEMBER 19th

New York, Aug. 27 Just about three weeks more and the bulk of our refined young college athletes will proceed about the business of fracturing each other's bones so as to add more honor and glory to their Alma Mater.

They pry the lid off the football season on September 19th with a number of high school games and two real games—Carlisle vs. Albright at Carlisle, Pa., and the University of Maine vs. Fort McKinley at Orono, Me.

On the Saturday following, about a score more of the big leagues will stage their first games, and the schedule for the 3rd of October shows that every institution in the country will have its gridiron army in action.

The biggest game of the year will be the Harvard-Michigan combat at Cambridge on October 31st. The Harvard outfit with Brickley Mahan and a half dozen other of the 1913 champions, will have a team that should rank as wonderful as any that ever battled for the Crimson.

Michigan lost Craig, its wonderful half-back of 1913 team will be missing, but "Hurry Up" Yost feels confident that he can weld together a real battle—and no alibis if they lost.

"The game with Harvard this year will determine Michigan's standing for the past 15 years and the next 10 years," Yost told his pupils. "In meeting Harvard we will meet the best there is in the East. We will encounter a style of play that is different than ours, and different than we have met before."

"Michigan's reputation in the football world is at stake in this game. A decisive victory for Michigan will bear us out in our contention for twelve or thirteen years—that the western teams on the average are superior to the best in the East. A defeat, even if our team is not up to the old Michigan standard, shatters our contentions. So we must not lose. We must win."

Quite a number of college coaches whose proteges have been beaten up in other years by the Carlisle Indians now seem to have "discovered" a good excuse to duck out of school game with the Indians in 1915.

The Indians are tainted!!! They get real money for playing. Honest, they do. And the strange part of it is they aren't ashamed to admit now, and never have made any secret of it in the past. Probably the dual coaches wouldn't get so excited about it if those Indians had given their teams half a chance in past football arguments. But they haven't. They just met the white enemy and walloped them until they were tired. Then they rested and renewed the walloping.

The fact that the Indian players get a divvy of the gate receipts never has been disguised by Coach Elmer Warner. The school, being a government proposition, does not feel that it can conscientiously accept the big sums realized from football for the general maintenance of the college. The football expense each year do not total over $30,000—sometimes less.

Warner took a contract to coach the school. He did it on something like a commission basis. He agreed to take all the receipts and pay the expenses. The rest was to be his for services. But Warner never has kept all the residue. He has deducted for himself each year a portion that would be equivalent to what he would get in the way of a salary, were he on a straight salary. The balance he has proportioned equally among the team members. These facts are public property; the books at the Indian school will show just what the football receipts have been each year and just what disposition has been made of the same.

ROAD NEAR MALINE IS STREWN WITH THE DEAD

Amsterdam, Aug. 27, via London.—The Telegram's Antwerp correspondent wires that fighting was resumed yesterday morning in the vicinity of Malines, where the Belgians have been engaged daily with German advance troops.

"The road from Malines toward Villvorde, six miles northeast of Brussels," the correspondent adds, "is littered with bodies of men and horses, while in the fields pasturing cattle have been killed by shrapnell. The Belgians captured one field gun. Everything in Brussels is going on the same as before the German occupation."

reoccupy the city. Belgian operations beyond Malines were continued throughout Tuesday night. The Belgian forces succeeded in destroying defensive works constructed by the Germans.

Violent Combat at Tournai.

A dispatch from Ghent says: "A violent combat raged at Tournai on Monday, the cannonade lasting from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock the next morning. Workmen relate that the Germans were driven back, and that the French flag was flying at Orlor, in east Flanders."

Holding the German Lines.

German forces delivered an attack on the French southern frontier yesterday (Tuesday). They were repulsed and retired all along the line. This information was given out by the official bureau yesterday afternoon.

British troops are holding the German lines between Givet and Dinant. They have been subjected to enormous pressure from the Germans who are continually charging the lines in an effort to break them; but the war office insists that not only are the lines holding, but the British have been able to push them forward at several points.

English Troops the Target.

The Germans apparently have singled out the English to bear the brunt of the fighting, and are sending against them massed bodies of infantry, while shelling the English position with guns hastily mounted in the hills and concealed behind heavy timber.

Meanwhile, the work of hastening reinforcements to the continent is in progress. Additional troops are reported to have landed in France yesterday and to have been rushed to the front.

English Losses Unknown.

Owing to the difficulty of compiling a correct list along such an extended battle front, no details of the British casualties, which Premier Asquith estimated yesterday at 2,000, yet have been received. The delay is increasing the distress of anxious relatives of men at the front.

The announcement of losses, however, only seems to have intensified British determination, judging from the extra work being performed by the recruiting officers. This tenacity of purpose was further evidenced by Premier Asquith in the house of commons yesterday afternoon in making the announcement that he proposed to ask King George to convey to the king of the Belgians the admiration with which Great Britain regarded "the heroic resistance of his army and people to the wanton invasion of their territory and an assurance of the determination of this country to support in every way the efforts of Belgium to vindicate her own independence and the public law of Europe."

Battle Raging at Malines.

London, Aug. 27.—British marines have been landed at Ostend. An Amsterdam dispatch states that "terrible battle is raging at Malines."

English Position Satisfactory.

Premier Asquith announced in parliament this morning that the British troops position is satisfactory. Germans "Moving Forth."

Paris, Aug. 27.—French wounded arriving here describe the German army as a "moving fortress" surrounded by fire, forming a mass that seems to be moved by powerful machinery.

Floating Mine Sinks Traveler.

London, Aug. 27.—A British ship in the North Sea struck a floating mine, one of the crew going down with the ship.

The press is doing its work properly. The printing, cutting and folding are all done by the press, and so rapidly that the saving of time in printing the Progress will mean the furnishing of the news of the day at least an hour later than was possible with the old press.

accompanied the press to this office and has been placed in position. An immense melting pot, a stea mtable, casting box, tail cutter, shaving machine, trimmers, etc.—everything necessary to the casting and preparing the form for the press—are connected with printing on a web press.

With the old press. This is one of the reasons why the management of the Progress decided to replace the old press with a new and much faster press.

Stereotyping Apparatus. To print on the web press it is necessary to stereotype the forms of type after they have been made up. complete stereotyping equipment

The web press and its stereotyping outfit are something new in Clearfield, and the public is invited to call and witness the operation of getting out a modern newspaper. It was because the public has shown its appreciation of the efforts of the Progress management to print an up-to-date newspaper that the new press was installed.

The Type Setting Machine.
For some months the Progress has had in operation an Intertype composing machine, a machine which those who have seen it at work declare can do everything but talk. This machine is indeed a marvelous compilation of thousands of pieces, each of which, when assembled, works smoothly, quickly and efficiently, producing lines of type of various sizes as required.

The operator of the Intertype composing machine can set more type than half a dozen of the fastest hand type setters. The type is set in solid lines, so that it may be easily handled.

Why These Improvements.
These improvements were made to the equipment of the Progress office because the owners and manager of this paper believe that Clearfield will continue to grow in population and increase its business prestige. The Progress has no cause for complaint against the reception that has been given its efforts to give the people of the town and county a first-class newspaper, and we believe that our desire to print a newspaper which deserves the name will receive the support of its readers.

The circulation of the Progress is constantly growing, because the people want to know what is going on in their own country and to learn the latest news from the war in Europe.

Latest and Best News.
With a new fast press which will enable the paper to receive and put in type of news up to a few minutes of the time of going to press the Progress will be in a position to publish war news and other information in advance of that found in any other newspaper to be had in Clearfield.

The Progress has always had faith in the future of Clearfield, and to the best of its ability this paper has stood loyally by the town in which it is published, being satisfied that the people of Clearfield would patronize and appreciate a newspaper which strives to advance their own and the town's best interests.

Oliver Typewriter Ribbons.
Oliver Typewriter Ribbons—the best on the market—may be had at the Clearfield Progress office. Any color of ribbon, price 60c. If by mail, remit 65c and ribbons will be forwarded promptly.

reached the world by this time. The two fleets now in the North sea are, in their intricacy of construction and their death-dealing facilities, the finest product of all ages of maritime warfare, which is as old as the sea and as old as mankind.

These fleets are to fight the most important battle of the war, for the supremacy of the sea is perhaps the greatest prize of the great conflict—England has held the leadership of the ocean. Germany wants it. Germany is fighting to control the balance of power of Europe and to control the colonies of the world. If she would command the land, Germany must control the sea.

So it is that a vital, if not the most vital issue of the great war, hangs on the outcome of affairs in the North sea and that is the one thing about which the public has not the slightest inkling. Everything is fair in love and war, old adage has it. Love is always with the world. There are daily reminders of its existence, but the world is now learning again that all is fair in war, also.

It was three hundred years ago that Francis Bacon told the English: "He that commands the sea is at great liberty and may take as much or as little of war as he will, whereas those that are strongest by land are, nevertheless, often in difficulties."

Germany, under Wilhelm II, is ambitious for supremacy in Europe. She is now engaged in great fighting in Belgium. If Germany loses this land battle, her ambition can yet be satisfied if she gains in her warfare on the sea. On the other hand, England holding the supremacy of the sea if she is defeated in the land fighting, can yet hold the command of a Germany only victorious on the land.

In nearly all great wars naval victories have decided the issue. In battles deciding the command of the sea, the world's history has had its turning points. The naval battle of Salamis was fought B. C. 480 and its victory for the Greeks saved the European continent from Oriental domination under the Persians. The naval battle of Actium, fought B. C. 31, overthrew Anthony and Cleopatra and overthrew as well their plan to make Alexandria, Egypt, the capital of the Roman empire and shaping its destinies by Eastern instead of Western ideas. The battle of Actium marked the end of the Roman empire, with many vicissitudes, which lasted until Napoleon's time.

The defeat of the great Spanish Armada of Philip II, by the English in 1589 when Elizabeth was queen not only saved England to the English, but saved English civilization to the western world of America.

Great Britain was again rescued from invasion and the domination of the First Napoleon by the battle of Trafalgar in 1805.

It was on May 27, 1905, when Russia and Japan were at war in eastern waters, that Admiral Togo began the great naval battle of Tsushima, the Japanese fleet reading his inspiring message as the flags fluttered up to the signal yards of Togo's flagship, Mikasa. "The rise or fall of our empire depends upon today's battle. Let every man do his utmost." Japan on that day swept the Russian fleet from the sea at Tsushima and eventually swept it from Eastern waters. The Japanese-Russian war was practically settled by that battle and Japan's place among the great powers of the world dates from that engagement.

Should Germany be able to obtain in the North such a naval victory over the British warships it would probably win the war for her and rank in importance to a Trafalgar or Tsushima.

Austrian Flies From the Allies

(By International News Service)
Rome, Aug. 27.—A Cettigne dispatch states that an Austrian squadron of four cruisers and eight destroyers bombarded Badua, but fled at the approach of French and British warships.

Austrian naval officers admit that the cruiser Zeenta, a destroyer, was sunk during a recent battle.

CIMO TO BE SENTENCED BY COURT ON MONDAY

It is probable that Philip Cimò, the murderer of Marie Bruzotte in Clearfield last spring, will be called before Judge Bell for sentence on Monday next. Cimò will be the second murderer to be sentenced to the electric chair from Clearfield county. Actelli, who killed another Italian at Madona, being the first.

Argument on the application of the attorneys for Raphael Mastriani and Paul Caro, convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of Antonio Matafire, on the West Side, for a new trial will also probably be heard by the court on Monday.

Belgium—Production 1913-14, 239,000 tons sugar. Sowings, 1914-15, 54,000 hectares. Liege province is the second largest sugar producer in the country, growing about one-quarter of the crop. Brabant province, containing Brussels, is the next largest, then Liege. About one-third of the crop is produced in Hainaut, south of Brussels on the French border. Namur and the other provinces produce but little sugar.

Holland—Production 1913-14, 230,000 tons sugar. Sowings, 1914-15, 60,000 hectares. North Brabant, which stretches along most of the Belgium border contains 16 of the 28 factories of Holland. Limburg contains none, and there are but four other factories near the German border.

Germany—Production 1913-14, 2,730,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 750,000 hectares. Alsace, Lorraine and Baden produce little sugar, but Rhineland, which borders on Belgium has about 18,000 hectares in beets this year and last year produced $6,792 tons of sugar.

The four districts of Prussia bordering on Russia are large producers of sugar. The sowings in East and West Prussia totaled 35,165 hectares in Posen 65,863 hectares, and in Silesia 80,828 hectares, a total of 184,796 hectares, or about a third of the German crop thus borders Russia. Each fall it is customary to bring large number of Russians into these districts of work in the beets. West of Posen is Brandenburg containing Berlin, where 23,360 hectares were planted this year.

The other districts producing large quantities of sugar are Pomerania and Mecklenburg on the Baltic Sea, the province of Saxony, in which is Magdeburg, growing 124,124 hectares, and Hanover, Brunswick and Anhalt. All these are in the center of the country. The kingdom of Saxony and other states and provinces of the empire produce small amounts.

Russia—Production 1913-14, 1,705,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 840,000 hectares. The sowings in Poland constitute about a tenth of these, these in Podolia and Volhynie, on the Galician (Austrian) border about a fourth, and Kiev adjoining these latter, inland, another fourth.

Austria—Production 1913-14, 1,710,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15 produced near the Russian border. Galicia contains 2 factories, and Bukovina 3. Hungary, farther south contains 32 factories. Bosnia and Slavonia each contain 1 factory. The other 188 factories are located mostly in Bohemia and other western sections bordering Germany.

Kaly—Production 1913-14, 327,800 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 38,600 hectares. Of the 39 factories 9 are located in the old Province of Venice, on which borders Austria and Switzerland; 15 are in Emilia, the next province south of these.

Servia—Production in 1913-14, 6,500 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 9,000 hectares. Servia has only 2 beet sugar factories.

Roumania—Production 1913-14, 32,000 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15, 20,000 hectares. Roumania has 5 factories.

Bulgaria—Production 1913-14, 7,800 tons sugar. Sowings 1914-15 hectares. Bulgaria has 2 beet factories.

GERMAN CRUISER SUNK BY RUSSIANS

Capture Two Towns.
"Our troops occupied the towns of Instenburg and Angherburg, thirty-two miles south of Interburg (east Prussia). On August 23 and 24, in the region north of Kedenburg, we fought a successful, at sanguinary engagement with important forces of Germans.

"On Sunday and Monday our troops facing intrenchments and wire entanglements attacked these positions, using hand grenades and bayonets. Toward 11 o'clock the German army corps was enveloped by us on the left flank and fled to Osterode (eighteen miles northeast of Goettingen, in the province of Hanover), abandoning several cannon, quick-firing guns, ammunition cases and prisoners.

"On the left bank of the River Vietha the enemy retired from the line Plock-Lentchitz."

Russians Occupy Marienburg.
Paris, Aug. 27.—A report was in circulation yesterday afternoon that Russian troops have occupied Marienburg, in west Prussia, twenty-seven miles southeast of Danzig. This has not been officially confirmed.

German Cruiser Sunk.
Washington, Aug. 27.—The German foreign office informs the embassy here that the cruiser Hadelberg was sunk at the entrance of a bay on the coast of Finland after battling with a superior Russian squadron.

LISTEN! FALL IS ALMOST HERE

Your boy will start to school in a few days and he will want to look nice on the day he goes up to meet the new teacher, and you should get him one of the fine little school suits we are showing.

Boys as a rule are hard on clothes, and especially on the pants, and so to make his new suit last as long as possible, we have an extra pair of pants which goes with each suit.

This showing of boy's wear is composed of the latest and choicest patterns and styles and selected with just as much care as is used in buying for the grown-ups. Make your boy proud on opening day, and that will help him to start right and he will have done just that much better when the year is done. The price of these suits is just right for your purse.
